Dr. David Soskice is School Professor of Political Science and Economics at the London School of Economics, where he is charged with promoting interdisciplinary scholarship. He is also currently President of the European Political Science Association. He was previously at Nuffield College, Oxford and Duke University; prior to that director of the political economy research division at the WZB in Berlin since 1990; and from 1967 to 1990 Economics fellow at University College, Oxford. His main research is on patterns of advanced capitalism and democratic politics in the advanced nations, with Torben Iversen (Harvard), carrying forward previous work with Peter Hall (Harvard) on Varieties of Capitalism. He is finishing Macroeconomics and the Financial System with Wendy Carlin (UCL), forthcoming in 2014 (OUP); and working with Nicola Lacey (All Souls, Oxford) on crime and punishment in the US and the UK.

Professor Wolfgang Merkel is Director of the “Democracy and Democratization” research program at the Social Science Research Centre Berlin (WZB) and Professor of Political Science at the Humboldt University Berlin. He is a member of a number of key bodies, including the Berlin-Brandenburg Academy of Sciences and Humanities and, as a non-party member, the Basic Values Commission of the Executive Committee of the German Social Democratic Party (SPD). His recent publications include The Future of Representative Democracy (2011, co-edited with Sonia Alonso and John Keane); System Transformation (2010); as well as journal articles on such subjects as democracy and democratization, 21st-century dictatorships, political parties, comparative public policy, the future of social democracy, welfare states and social justice. His major present researches focus on various aspects of the crisis of democracy.

Professor Anna Soci graduated in Bologna and spent a full year in Princeton (USA) as a full-time post-graduate visiting student. She is currently a Professor of Economics at the University of Bologna, a life member of Clare Hall in Cambridge (UK), an Associate of the Land Economy Department, Cambridge University (UK), and a member of the Academy Advisory Board of the Network for European Studies, University of Helsinki. She was a Fellow of the Italian Academy, Columbia University (USA), in January-May 2012. She was just awarded the Jemolo Fellowship by the Nuffield College in Oxford (UK), for the Hilary Term 2013. Responsible of several international and national research projects, she completed recently the coordination of the project TERA – financed by the EU in the 6FP – on the economics of industrial agglomeration in remote and marginal European areas. Her current research topic is the linkage between the rise in inequalities in western industrialized countries and the robustness and quality of democracy.
Dr. Thomas Biebricher received his PhD in Political Science from the Albert-Ludwigs-Universität Freiburg in 2003. From 2003 to 2009 he was a DAAD Visiting Assistant Professor at the University of Florida in Gainesville. From 2009 to 2012 he worked as a Junior Research Group Director at the interdisciplinary Cluster of Excellence “The Formation of Normative Orders” at the Goethe Universität in Frankfurt. The theme of the research group was “Crisis and Normative Order - Varieties of ‘Neoliberalism’ and their Transformation”. Since October 2012 he has held a temporary professorship for Political Theory and Philosophy at the Goethe-Universität. His work has appeared in Theory&Event, Philosophy and Public Criticism, Economy and Society, New Political Science and the European Journal of Social Theory. He is currently working on a book manuscript entitled The Political Philosophy of Neoliberalism.

Dr. Wei Zhao is an Associate Professor of Sociology and of Organizational Science at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. His research focuses on social inequality, economic sociology, organizational sociology, and China studies. His current research projects examine social inequality, organizational behaviors, and inter-organizational relationships during China’s market transition. He has also conducted a series of studies on how institutional classification systems affect market identity and product price in the California and French wine industries. His publications have appeared in American Sociological Review, Annual Review of Sociology, and Organization Science.

Trish Hennessy is the founding director of the new Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives’ (CCPA) Ontario office. She also founded and directed the CCPA’s national project examining income inequality in Canada, which began in 2006. She is the principle of her own strategic communications consulting firm. Her blog, www.framedincanada.com examines how we talk about the challenges of our times. Her monthly index, Hennessy’s Index (www.policyalternatives.ca/index) takes a snapshot of key issues and breaks them down by the numbers. Trish is a former newspaper journalist. She has a B.A. Sociology from Queen’s University, B.S.W. from Carleton University, and M.A. in Sociology from OISE/University of Toronto.

Dr. Zoe Lefkofridi is a lecturer at the Institute for Political Science at the University of Vienna. In 2012, she was a research fellow at the University’s Institute for European Integration Research. Her research focus is on European integration, multilevel governance and Europeanization as well as political parties, democracy and political representation in the European Union. She also researches inequality and discrimination in democratic regimes with an interest in gender, migration and citizenship. She has worked with national and international scientific projects, such as “Choose for Greece” and “Designing and Operating an Infrastructure for the Empirical Inquiry of Political and Social Radicalism in Greece.”
Dr. Maxwell A. Cameron (Ph.D., California, Berkeley, 1989) specializes in comparative politics of Latin America and international political economy at the University of British Columbia, Vancouver. He recently completed a Ford Foundation supported project on participation and representation in Latin America. At the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions, Cameron is working on democratic reform and citizen engagement. In 2011 he convened a public conversation at UBC on “Why don’t (more) good people enter politics?” As a Distinguished Scholar in Residence at the Peter Wall Institute for Advanced Studies (2011-12) he organized a colloquium series Aristotle’s idea of “practical wisdom” and its relevance in politics today.